R E M A R K S.

In opening to the Public this collection of specimens of drawing, painting, and modelling, it is important to observe that they are exhibited as tentative exercises of students, produced during their progress through the course of studies which is prescribed in the Schools of Design, with the view of disseminating knowledge of Art in its various applications to the purposes of ornament and decoration, and especially to the general improvement of ornamented manufactures in this country; and that, with the exception of the works of the Female Class of the Head School, nearly all the coloured works have been executed under the disadvantage of artificial light in the evening.

It should also be remarked that the number of works exhibited is only a part of the whole number executed in the schools; and that this is more especially true in regard to the Head School, the productions of which, during the last year, would amply suffice to cover the whole space occupied by the present exhibition.

The following particulars may be interesting to visitors:—

The system of Schools of Design under Government superintendence comprises the Head School in Somerset House, containing 480 students, and 18 branch schools—in Spitalfields, Manchester, Birmingham, Coventry, Nottingham, Norwich, Sheffield, Stoke, Hanley, Leeds, York, Huddersfield, Newcastle, Glasgow, Paisley, Dublin, Belfast, and Cork—containing 3000 students: total, 3480.

Number of specimens of drawing, painting, and modelling sent from the 18 branch schools for inspection	2183
Of which the number exhibited is	1008
Number of do. sent from the Head School for inspection	7571
Of which the number exhibited is	1574
From the 18 branch schools the number of elementary designs exhibited is	26
Ditto of applied designs (of which 104 are from Spitalfields)	214
From the Head School—number of elementary designs	81
Ditto of applied designs	427

Visitors will find it convenient to commence with Room A, and to proceed in alphabetic order to Room K.

is opening to the public this collection of specimens of drawing, painting, and modelling. It is important to observe that they are exhibited as tentative exercises of students, produced during their progress through the course of studies which is prescribed in the Schools of Design, with the view of disseminating knowledge of Art in its various applications to the purposes of ornament and decoration, and especially to the general improvement of ornamented manufactures in this country; and that, with the exception of the works of the Temple Class of the Head School, nearly all the coloured works have been executed under the direct supervision of artists in the evening.

The following particulars may be interesting to visitors:—
